St. Aloysius to host speaker discussing organ donation

Paul Byrne will speak Oct. 7 at 7:30 p.m. at St. Aloysius Church on the corner of Clough and South Summit Street. Byrne, who will speak in the gymnasium, has appeared on CNN's "Crossfire" and on "Good Morning, America" speaking on the issues of physician-assisted suicide, brain death and organ donation. Brian Lee, St. Aloysius member, said the speech is a chance for people to learn things about organ donation that few ever understand. The speech is open to the public and will include a question and answer period.

Husband pleads guilty to involuntary manslaughter

MARIETTA, Ohio — A man accused of fatally shooting his wife has pleaded guilty to a lesser charge just before his trial was to begin.

Cecil Sindledacker, 49, of Marietta, pleaded guilty Monday to involuntary manslaughter. He faces five to 25 years in prison in the death of his wife, Lila, 58, on April 25. Sentencing was set for Oct. 30.

Sindledacker was indicted in May on charges of aggravated murder, murder and involuntary manslaughter for shooting Mrs. Sindledacker in the head.

Sindledacker told authorities that he did not mean to kill his wife. He had said he was handling the gun while intoxicated and pointed it in her direction.

As a condition of the agreement, Sindledacker agreed to turn over his wife's farm, house and property to her adult children, Glenn Robertson of Cocoa Beach, Fla., and Sarah Smith of Hilliard.

Assistant Prosecutor Jim Schneider said Sindledacker would have inherited the property had a jury convicted him of involuntary manslaughter.

About 100 jurors had been asked to report for jury duty Monday to hear Sindledacker's case.

Highway patrol finds Marietta man three times legal blood-alcohol level at time of accident

MARIETTA, Ohio — A man who died when his car hit and killed a high school girl tested nearly three times the legal limit for alcohol at the time of the accident, the State Highway Patrol said.

Aaron Scott Best's blood-alcohol level registered .288 percent on Sept. 21, patrol Sgt. Bob Gochoel said Monday. The legal limit is .10 percent.

Best had just left a party when his car crossed the center line on state Route 7, north of Newport. He forced one car off the road, sideswiped a second and before his car hit head-on the car driven by Amy McKenna, 16, of New Matmoras. Best and McKenna both died instantly.

There was no evidence that McKenna, a junior at Frontier High School, had any alcohol, the patrol said.

Wage increase might reduce working hours

Jay Young
The BG News

Students employed on campus are receiving raises this week, causing some tight budgets to become even tighter.

Under federal law, the minimum wage increased 50 cents Tuesday to $4.75 per hour. It is a change most University departments did not count on when budgeting last year.

Reva Walker, assistant director of Student Employment, said there is no estimate on how much the change will cost the entire University, but each department will have to use current budgets despite the change.

"Either they might choose to cut back on the student employees that they have or cut back on the number of hours each student works," Walker said.

She said most departments will have to make some kind of adjustment.

"Only a few departments have taken the steps to increase their wages, so their jobs won't be affected," Walker said. "The majority of departments are affected."

Christopher Dalton, senior vice president for finance, said, unlike the last time the wage increased, the University will not be able to help individual departments.

"The last time we had enough advance notice to build in some help for the departments and some flexibility in the budget," Dalton said. "This time we had neither enough flexibility in the budget or advance notice, so there is not any general assistance."

Chris Miko, associate dean for Library Services, said he is not sure how the increase will affect library employees and service.

"At this point we're not sure what our response will be. We're certainly not going to try and cut service," Miko said. "We do rely heavily on the student assistance, and they do provide excellent work. Any cutback that's driven by the budget would certainly affect our service that we provide here."

Miko said the change will cost the library about $20,000 and Instructional Media Services about $12,000. He said some money has been reserved to handle the switch.

"Since we planned our budget beginning in July, we knew that this bill was pending in Congress at the time, so we received some money and didn't allocate it until we knew," Miko said. "We're going to allocate that money accordingly, but we don't think it is going to cover the entire increase."

Jane Schimpf, associate vice president of Auxiliary Services, oversees both Food Services and the University Bookstore. She said Food Services will not be affected by the change because employees there already receive $5 per hour.

"The minimum wage increase now is not going to effect us," Schimpf said. "We anticipated it early. We knew they were talking about raising the minimum wage."

Though Food Services made the change in June, Schimpf said it cost $70,000 to make the adjustment.

Schimpf said the bookstore should not have any trouble making the adjustment.

"We don't have a huge amount of student employees there," she said. "It's not major dollars for them."

Groups can really clean up campus by adopting

University organizations are encouraged to participate in the Adopt-a-Block program during Homecoming week.

The program is a service project for Organizations to become involved with the University community, according to Misty Barman, 1996 homecoming director.

Several clean-up days will take place throughout the year, however the days have not been scheduled, Barman said.

Organizations, as well as offices throughout the University, were invited to help with the clean-up, she said.

Barman also said groups of students may be formed to help if they are all available to help on each clean-up day throughout the year.

Patricia Dumminger, vice president of the Recreation Management Association, said RMA plans to participate because the program is a great volunteer activity.

"It is important for campus organizations to get involved with the school and show that they are school spirited," she said.

Participants should meet in the field north of Memorial Hall Oct. 9 at 4:45 p.m. The clean-up will take place from 5 to 6 p.m.

Participants are invited to return to the meeting place for a volunteer party. The party, which lasts from 6 to 7 p.m., includes pizza and music provided by WFAL.

The application should be turned in today at 330 University Union.

Judge dashes Perot's debate aspirations

Harry Rosenthal
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A federal judge frustrated Ross Perot's hopes of sharing the debate stage with President Clinton and Bob Dole, ruling Tuesday that the courts had no jurisdiction in Perot's dispute with debate sponsors.

Lawyers for Perot and another presidential candidate, John Hagelin of the Natural Law Party, said they would appeal the judge's dismissal of their cases and ask the U.S. Court of Appeals for quick action.

The first debate is Sunday night.

Perot's complaint, said U.S. District Judge Thomas F. Hogan,

"should be with Congress and the regulatory framework it established." That means Perot must deal with the Federal Election Commission in seeking to force his way into the debates from which he has been excluded by the private Commission on Presidential Debates.

Perot already has complained to the FEC, alleging that the debate commission has broken federal law and asking that it be blocked from sponsoring the debates if he is not allowed in. But FEC spokeswoman Sharon Snyder said the agency by law must follow a complaint process that cannot realistically be completed by Election Day.

In declining to act, Hogan let stand the debate commission's decision that Perot should be excluded because he didn't have a realistic chance of winning the election. In the most recent CNN-USA Today-Gallup poll, released Tuesday, Democrat Clinton was favored by 57 percent of those surveyed, Republican challenger Dole by 32 per-

WBGU plans show

Jay Young

University President Sidney Ribeau will begin hosting a new talk show on WBGU Channel 27 Thursday.

The new program will air every Thursday evening at 8 p.m. Ribeau, along with several student co-hosts, will interview guests and have a roundtable discussion on a broad variety of public affairs topics and social issues.

Ribeau said the show will help him connect with the campus and Northwest Ohio.

"The reason for the show is to better promote Bowling Green State University as a resource for the region," Ribeau said. "We're going to do that because it's essential if we're going to move the institution forward."

Tim Smith, WBGU public relations director, said the show will feature the role students play at the University.

"This is an effort on the part of Dr. Ribeau to highlight students and the work that students do at the University," he said.

Smith said the show will feature a new series of programs every month. During the month of October, as Americans prepare to vote, a series of programs will focus on "Leadership, Heroes and Role Models in Contemporary Society."

Guests will include University faculty, students and local, regional and state leaders in government, business and industry.

Letters to the Editor

Following from the Campus Lighting Audit that took place on Monday evening, I wanted to offer some clarification on the quotation chosen for the front page: "We have to be careful about putting lights on the ground that will bother people while they are trying to sleep". Having lived and worked in Residence Life, I sympathize with the plight of on-campus students who are often faced with obstacles to a peaceful living environment. Bright lighting, excessive noise and high traffic are but some of the issues that challenge their quality of life. I would not, however, intend to infer that these considerations should be prioritized above campus safety.

Having experienced personal safety concerns in the past, I think a lot about how "safe" this campus is. This is important because people -- including myself -- do not learn, teach, mentor, work or administrate effectively if they don't feel secure in their environment.

Following from this approach, I would strongly encourage students, staff and faculty to prioritize public safety as a guiding principle in all future planning. Physical Plant, Campus Security and the Grounds Department need to work together to ensure that existing lights are well maintained and that trees are trimmed to maximize their effectiveness. Further, the endless process to have campus lighting upgraded MUST be expedited. As I understand it, the funds (approx. $500,000) to complete this project are being released next week ... none too soon if you ask me.

If you have questions or comments about campus lighting improvements, please contact Graduate Student Senate at 372-2426. As is always the case, I'd be happy to hear from you.

Pathetic. That is the word that describes how others feel about Bowling Green State University students and for their showing to this past Saturday's football game against Central Michigan. Ashamed and embarrassed. That is how BGSU students should feel about themselves. The lack of school spirit that exists here is one that should make each and every one of us extremely ashamed and embarrassed. When BG has teams that do awful and have a slump season, we bash the team. However, when we have teams that do extremely well, we show our spirit and support by not attending games. Is that not a joke? I also hear many people comment on how lazy BGSU students are. Is this true? Do we want people to view us as being lazy and pathetic? Well, if not, why do we keep proving to them that we are? Let me ask you this: Is a 1:30 game really too early for you? I don't know about you, but I don't know what's more fun than waking up Saturday morning/afternoon after a fun Friday night, getting together with a bunch of friends, partying before a football game, and then showing my support to a team and coach that is more deserving than any team this school has ever seen.

The next time you put on a sweatshirt of t-shirt that has Bowling Green on it, ask yourself if you truly deserve to wear those letters and colors. You see, each time you put something on with BGSU, Falcons, brown and orange, or even tell someone that you go here, you are showing something that you have pride in -- your school. So prove it.

Starving in the name of perfection

"I always say beauty is only sin deep." Saki (H. H. Munro)

Plato once said beauty resides in the eye of the beholder. Perhaps this is the bleeding heart of the problem. Of all the facets of women's oppression, the beauty myth is arguably one of the most challenging walls in existence. It shall be my aim to expose the beauty myth, and examine the detrimental consequences of this form of oppression.

Throughout our nation, women are constantly being bombarded with conceptualized images and ideas of what it means to be beautiful. Indeed, being beautiful has practically become synonymous with being slim. Mary Pipher, author of Reviving Ophelia, the current bestseller about psychological and physical health of teenage girls says: "Research shows that virtually all women are ashamed of their bodies. It used to be adult women and teenage girls who were ashamed, but now you see the shame down to the very young girls -- 10, 11 years old. Society's standard of beauty is an image that is literally just short of starvation for most women." This implanted desire to achieve an unnatural body weight greatly endangers the welfare of all women.

Jason E. Wolfe

It has been through recent decades that heavy emphasis has been placed upon skinniness. Since 1979, Miss America contestants have become so dangerously thin that the majority now are at least 15 percent below the already lax recommended body weight. (Interestingly, that 15 percent is medically considered a possible symptom of anorexia.) In the past thirty years, the voluptuous size 12 of Marilyn Monroe has given way to the size 2's of Niki Taylor's and Tori Spelling's.

As for the everyday woman in our country, this produces incredible amounts of anxiety coupled with depression in the futile attempts to achieve the "perfect body". "We see more eating disorders for women and girls these days than we did 10 years ago," says Dr. Arnold Anderson, a professor of psychiatry at the University of Iowa, who specializes in eating disorders. Even more tragic is the fact that these unnatural concepts of beauty are affecting young adolescents the hardest. In a recent sociological study involving 100 fourth grade girls showed that 80 of them were either dieting or had previously engaged in a diet (Wolf, 1991). However, this study explained that each of these girls already fell in a safe and natural weight category.

In our nutritionally starved country, 1-4% of high school girls and college women have been diagnosed with anorexia or bulimia. Compare this with the meager 0.5-1% of girls who had anorexia or bulimia in 1976. At Northwestern University, Illinois, according to the university health officials, bulimia is so common among students that "the pipes in one sorority keep getting clogged because so many people are throwing up in the sinks." As for additional facts and figures, chew on this:

5'4"-142- The average height and weight of an American woman.

5'9"-110- The average height and weight of a model.

33%- Percentage of American women who wear size 16 or larger.

80%- Percentage of dieting women

20%- Percentage of dieting men

50%-Percentage of women on a diet at any one time.

50%- Percentage of 9-year old girls who have ever dieted.

$10 billion- Revenues of the diet industry in 1970.

$37 billion- Revenues of the diet industry today.

33-23-33- Average measurements of a contemporary fashion model.

Not surprisingly, there has been a rapid rise in the implementation of 'quick fixes'. According to the American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgeons, the number of girls 18 and younger getting liposuction rose from 472 to 511 from 1992 to 1995 (this is the most recent data available).

Unfortunately, people are poised like vultures to attack imperfection. Since the moment of birth, women have been continually subjected and enslaved to the beauty myth. What this country needs is a revolution in our values, a re-definition of attractiveness that broadens the parameters to include all people. Until we do so, women shall forever remain impotent to invoke change and break the shackles that hold them down.

Jason E. Wolfe, a weekly columnist, holds firm to the notion that true and lasting beauty comes from within a person. Reach him at jwolfe2 @bgnet for any comments.

U.S. INTELLIGENCE GUIDE TO THE KURDS

Campus sells sex, lies and audiotape

Mike Wendling

In theory, capitalism goes hand in hand with democracy. The power is with the people, and we vote with our dollars.

theory, capitalism goes hand in hand with democracy. The power is with the people, and we vote with our dollars.

Unfortunately, we live in the real world. Companies affect "our" demand curves. We are inundated with advertising, from television, to radio, to portable consumer villages. Glance through the pages of this newspaper and you'll find at least a few instances of the word "sale".

A reasonable amount of this is necessary, of course. Consumers need information to make the rational choices that economists invasion. The media need advertising revenue to stay in business.

There comes a moment in time, however, when we need to draw a line. Business has influenced our culture to the point where our culture is business. The two are nearly indistinguishable.

Capitalism as currently practiced in the United States resembles a strangling claw more than Adam Smith's "invisible hand". Business and business-like ways of doing things are creeping into common usage. Two areas that have suffered under this method of thinking are government and education. Our leaders are expected to "cut costs" and "increase output" instead of "provide for the poor" and "educate children".

Chancellor Hairston of the Ohio Board of Regents feels so confident in using business metaphors that, despite a healthy dose of negative publicity prior to her address at President Ribea's inauguration, she used countless examples from the corporate world to demonstrate her plan for Ohio's future. Why shouldn't she? Her speech was just another beautiful event on the President's happy day. Any significant opposition to Ms. Hairston was probably lining up for pre-approved credit cards.

In one sense, I feel as if I'm defending the Alamo. Most of you reading this column probably agree with me, or at least are able to pick out the flaws my logic. The rest of the consuming world is lost, blissfully unaware of their support of oligopoly. I only preserve my sanity by ignoring the countless ways in which I, my peers, my relatives, and my friends pander to corporate interests. We are all guilty, even the most minimalist of us. Despite this guilt, I am still saddened and dismayed when I see walking beer advertisements and students using cars to cut a whole five minutes off of the morning trip to classes.

Which leads us back to Corporate City outside of Kreisler Quad and their apparently successful attempt to turn us all into passive buyers. I'm willing to bet the University received some sort of payment for allowing the various marketers to spoil my morning walk to classes. Which is fine, you might say. In a perfect world, the money might even go to reducing tuition. And after all, isn't this in accord with the Board of Regent's plan to improve education?

To which I reply with a deal. A contract, if you will. If the University will treat me like a human and a student instead of a consumer, I will not only gladly pay more tuition, but I will make it well worth their while in alumni contributions down the road.

Accused killer claims no memory of shooting

The Associated Press

CINCINNATI — A man accused of killing three people during a Dec. 15 shooting spree in a trucking company's office said Tuesday he feels like "a monster."

Gerald Lee Clemons, testifying before a Hamilton County Common Pleas Court jury at his murder trial, said he went to Trans-Continental Systems Inc. in suburban Evendale that day to collect his paycheck and get a weekend assignment to drive his truck.

Instead, he said, he got into a heated argument with a dispatcher, David Kreamelmeyer. Clemons testified that Kreamelmeyer charged him and threatened to call police when Clemons entered the office.

Clemons said he pulled out his 9mm pistol, but told jurors he did not recall anything else that happened in the office.

"I don't really have any basis for denying what happened. I can't remember any of it," Clemons said, sobbing when he talked about the victims.

"I feel terrible," he said. "I feel like a monster, like somebody who has no conscience and no control."

Prosecutors say Clemons knew what he was doing when he walked into the company's offices and gunned down Kreamelmeyer, 47, payroll secretary Christina Teetzel, 30, and dispatcher Robert Kinney, 40.

But defense lawyers say that Clemons, 54, of Cincinnati, went into a rage during the argument and lost control.

If jurors reject the defense scenario, they could convict Clemons of the most serious charge — aggravated murder — and recommend the death penalty.

Clemons testified that he walked out of the building, saw police officers and wondered why they were there.

But police officer Sandra Sears testified Monday that she remembers Clemons smiling as he emerged from the trucking company that day.

Another officer, Jerome Gadzala, described Clemons as "very calm, very cool and very collected." He said Clemons seemed relaxed at the police station.

Another prosecution witness, Trans-Continental employee Evelyn Dinkgrave, testified that she overheard Kreamelmeyer arguing on the phone less than a half hour before the shootings. Dinkgrave said she later learned the argument was with Clemons, who had failed to show up for a job the day before.

Dinkgrave testified that when Clemons walked into the office, she heard Kreamelmeyer shout for help and saw Clemons pull a gun.

"I dove under my desk," she said. "I could only hear the gunshots."

Proposal snuffs smoking

Teen-agers with tobacco would spend time in class

The Associated Press

FINDLAY, Ohio — Forget about smoking in the boy's room — or anywhere in public.

Under a proposed law, teen-agers caught lighting up will have to spend time in an anti-smoking class.

City Council was expected to discuss the issue Tuesday night.

The proposal law would make it illegal for minors to possess cigarettes or other tobacco products.

Anyone caught violating the law, would be charged with a minor misdemeanor. They would have to attend a two-hour class about the dangers of smoking. The class would be taught by a local anti-smoking group known as the Coalition for a Smoke-Free Findlay.

Upon completion of the class, the charge of possession of cigarettes or tobacco products would be dropped, and the teen-ager would have no record.

Failure to attend the class would result in the usual procedures for handling minor misdemeanors for juveniles. The teen-ager would have a choice of pleading guilty and paying a $50 fine or having the case heard before a Hancock County Juvenile Court judge.

If they appear in Juvenile Court and are found guilty, they would be required to pay court costs and still attend the two-hour class.

The measure is supported by anti-smoking groups and local tobacco merchants.

"Our goal isn't to sell cigarettes to the youth of Findlay," said Bill Wolf Jr., owner of Wolfies Snack Group. He said he supports the proposal law.

Coalition President Rick Watson said the new law would "help youths take this issue more seriously."

But some teen-agers on Tuesday were less than thrilled about the proposal designed to curb teen-aged smoking.

"I don't like the [proposed] law at all," said Troy Shaw, 15, as he stood outside Findlay High School. "If you smoke, it should be your decision."

Curtis Bennett, 16, of Findlay, agreed.

"We have the right to smoke whenever and however. It's my life," Bennett said.

Angela Troutman, 16, also opposed the measure.

"They tell us what we can wear. What we can do. What we can say. Now they want to tell us if we can or cannot smoke. We have no rights," she said.

But Monique Howard, 16, of Findlay, said she supports the proposal — even though she smokes.

"If you're not allowed to buy cigarettes, it's only right," she said.

The teen-agers claimed they could walk into almost any store in Findlay and buy cigarettes.

Officers collide while escorting Dole

The Associated Press

EUCLID, Ohio — Two Cleveland police officers were injured Tuesday after their motorcycles collided while escorting Republican presidential candidate Bob Dole to a campaign rally. Dole's limousine was not involved.

Don Dura, 52, and Brian Dorin, 39, suffered bruises and scrapes, and Dura also had a severe cut on his forehead, said Cleveland police spokeswoman, Detective Denise Reeves.

Dura was in fair condition and was held for observation Tuesday night at Meridia Euclid Hospital, while Dorin was treated and released, said Mary Rose Sullivan, a hospital spokeswoman.

Dura and Dorin were injured when their motorcycles collided around 10:40 a.m. on Interstate 90 in Euclid, a Cleveland suburb. The officers were escorting Dole from the Burke Lakefront Airport to the rally at the Lakeland Community College in Kirtland.

Reeves said the officers were trying to stop traffic from entering the highway at an entrance ramp when they swerved their motorcycles to avoid an oncoming car and collided, she said.

Dole spent five to 10 minutes with the officers at the hospital after the rally.

The Euclid police department is investigating the accident.

Mental patient pleads guilty

The Associated Press

DAYTON — A former mental patient accused of threatening the life of President Clinton has agreed to plead guilty, according to a plea agreement filed Tuesday in federal court.

Carroll Edward Qualls, 32, of Dayton, agreed to plead guilty to one count of threatening the president. In exchange, prosecutors agreed not to file any additional charges against Qualls.

Qualls faces up to five years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

He was arrested in March at the Dayton Mental Health Center after a threatening call was made to the Montgomery County sheriff's office.

According to an affidavit filed by the Secret Service, Qualls called the sheriff's office, identified himself, and said he planned to ride his motorcycle to Washington and shoot Clinton with a homemade 9 mm weapon as Clinton was jogging.

However, Qualls said he would first give Clinton a chance to leave the country or swing his vote to Republican presidential candidate Bob Dole, according to the affidavit.

The Secret Service said Qualls has a history of mental-health treatment and a criminal record.

cent and Reform Party candidate Perot by just 5 percent. There was a margin of potential sampling error of plus or minus 4 points.

Exclusion from the televised debates "makes it more difficult for us," Perot's running mate, Pat Choate, said after Tuesday's decision.

"At the same time it gives us a terrific issue and a great example of how closed the political system has become and how outsiders are truly excluded," he added.

He held out hope that the appeals court might be more sympathetic. "We always feared that at the lower level we'd lose the case. Most decisions are made on the appellate level," he said.

Perot was a participant in the 1992 debates with Clinton and George Bush.

Unabomber suspect receives indictment

Jeffrey Gold
The Associated Press
NEWARK, N.J. — A federal grand jury Tuesday indicted Unabomber suspect Theodore Kaczynski in the 1994 mail bomb slaying of an ad executive, giving prosecutors a second case that could carry the death penalty.

Kaczynski has now been charged in all three deaths attributed to the Unabomber and with eight bombings in six states that left 23 injured over 18 years.

The Berkeley math professor turned recluse was charged with transporting a bomb from Montana to San Francisco and then mailing it to Thomas J. Mosser's home in North Caldwell, N.J. When Mosser opened the package, it exploded, killing the 50-year-old executive vice president of Young & Rubicam Inc.

The bombing was the only one for which the Unabomber publicly claimed responsibility. In a letter published in The New York Times, he claimed that Mosser, in his former job as an executive with the public relations firm Burson-Marsteller, "helped Exxon clean up its public image" after the Exxon Valdez spill.

Kaczynski, 54, was arrested by federal agents at his Montana cabin April 3.

He is charged in California with four bombings that killed a computer store owner and a timber industry lobbyist and maimed two professors.

The Justice Department said it will prosecute the New Jersey case after Kaczynski is tried in Sacramento, Calif. Federal prosecutors in Sacramento and Newark have not said whether they will in fact seek the death penalty.

Trial witness arrested

Police interrupt testimony with bench warrant

Dinah Wisenberg Brin
The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — A former prostitute who reappeared after 14 years to recant her testimony against death row inmate Mumia Abu-Jamal was arrested on the witness stand Tuesday during her cross-examination by prosecutors.

The arrest of Veronica Jones on a bad-check charge outraged defense attorneys. They condemned it as another example of the witness intimidation they say police and prosecutors have used to railroad Abu-Jamal toward execution for the 1981 slaying of a police officer.

"It's brutal, it's coercive, it's shocking," said Abu-Jamal attorney Leonard Weinglass. "It shouldn't happen in a courtroom in this country."

Jones had just testified that she lied during Abu-Jamal's 1982 murder trial when courtroom deputies arrested her on an outstanding bench warrant.

"You're going to lock me up because I'm here?" she sobbed. Then she grew defiant, telling the prosecutor before she was led away: "So that's all you had? You think that's gonna make me change my story? It's not."

Jones, who now lives in Camden, N.J., has emerged as a key witness for lawyers appealing Abu-Jamal's conviction and death sentence.

Before her arrest, Jones — trembling, crying, and at times belligerent — testified that she saw two other men running from the crime scene, but changed her story under pressure from police.

Then a black activist and radio reporter, Abu-Jamal was found, wounded, a few feet from his own gun and the dying Officer Daniel Faulker.

Jones testified Tuesday that two officers visited her in jail while she was being held on an armed robbery charge and offered to save her from a possible 10-year prison term if she changed her earlier statement.

Because she was scared she wouldn't see her three children for 10 years, Jones said Tuesday, she testified at Abu-Jamal's trial that she saw no one leaving the scene.

"I had to get this off my chest while I can," Jones said Tuesday. She said she did not come forward for 14 years, even during a highly publicized appeal hearing last summer, because she was battling alcoholism and didn't listen to the news. She said she's been sober for nine months.

Iowa woman kills friend to claim baby as her own

Greg Smith
The Associated Press

KEOKUK, Iowa — Kimmi Lynn Hardy's own husband apparently believed she was pregnant. Neighbors, though, thought she looked a bit too skinny.

The neighbors were right.

Hardy, 36, was charged with murder Monday, accused of luring an acquaintance, Theresa Lynn Lund, to her home, shooting her to death and showing off Lund's 6-week-old baby as her own. She even threw a baby shower for herself.

"She was always skinny and then, lo and behold, she pulled up one day in a truck and pulled out a baby seat and brought it into the house through the back door," said Constance Garcia, a neighbor of Hardy's.

Tammie Korschgen, a mother of four who lives across the street, said: "I knew she was supposed to be pregnant. But I saw her out in the yard — this was in July — in shorts and a halter top, and she didn't look pregnant to me."

Hardy, who has an 18-year-old daughter and two sons, ages 15 and 12, from a previous marriage, was jailed on $2 million bail.

After the baby shower, an anonymous caller told police about a newborn who was too big for his age. Police found the child at the Hardy home on Sept. 18. Hardy said she bought the baby from someone out of state for $3,000, but footprint records showed the boy was Paul Lund, born July 16.

According to court papers, Hardy's husband of three months, Robert Eugene Hardy, told police that his wife shot the 34-year-old Lund on Aug. 28 in their basement and hid the body in a crawl space.

Four Oriole homeruns kill Tribe in game one

David Ginsburg

BALTIMORE -- After the umpires showed up late, the Baltimore Orioles struck early and never let up.

Brady Anderson opened Baltimore's first playoff appearance in 13 years with a leadoff homer, B.J. Surhoff homered twice and Bobby Bonilla added a grand slam as the Orioles beat the Cleveland Indians 10-4 Tuesday in the opener of their first-round AL playoff series.

Game 2 of the best-of-5 series will be played Wednesday afternoon in Baltimore.

The Orioles, who set a major-league record with 257 home runs during the regular season, built a 4-1 lead in the opening three innings against the defending AL champions. After Cleveland got within a run, Bonilla capped a five-run sixth with his first playoff homer in 14 games.

Manny Ramirez homered for the Indians, who led the majors with 99 wins this season -- including seven in 12 games against Baltimore, the wild-card team.

Associated Press

Nagy argues a call with umpire Drew Coble.

Umpires from both leagues threatened to boycott the playoffs unless Orioles second baseman Roberto Alomar was immediately suspended for spitting in the face of umpire John Hirschbeck on Friday night.

Replacement umpires were on hand in case the regulars stayed away. The scheduled umpire crew finally showed up, but their late arrival delayed the start of the game by approximately 20 minutes.

Alomar was given a five-day suspension Saturday, but he appealed the ruling. A hearing on the matter is currently scheduled for Thursday.

Alomar was cheered by the majority of the 47,644 fans at Camden Yards, but there was also a smattering of boos. He singled in his first at-bat and finished 1-for-4 with a sacrifice fly.

Leading 4-3, the Orioles used two walks and a single by Anderson to load the bases with one out in the sixth. Alan Embree replaced starter Charles Nagy and gave up a sacrifice fly to Alomar before reloading the bases by hitting Rafael Palmeiro.

Paul Shuey came in, and Bonilla sent a 3-2 pitch deep into the right-field seats to give Baltimore a 9-3 lead.

Nagy (0-1) yielded nine hits and a season-high seven earned runs.

Baltimore starter David Wells, who beat the Indians twice during the regular season, allowed four runs and eight hits in 6 2-3 innings. The left-hander was removed after he was hit on the left ankle by a hard grounder hit by Kevin Seitzer.

An RBI single by Kenny Lofton got the Indians to 9-4 in the seventh, but Surhoff hit his second homer of the game in the bottom of the inning.

Anderson, who set a major-league record by leading off a game with a homer 12 times during the regular season, hit Nagy's 1-2 pitch well over the right-field wall in his first career postseason at-bat leading off the first.

■ Umpires decide to appear at the last minute, Page 8

The Indians tied it on a home run by Ramirez in the second, but Surhoff restored Baltimore's one-run lead with a solo shot in the bottom half. Surhoff, like Anderson, was making his first playoff appearance.

The Orioles made it 4-1 in the third on a run-scoring double by Palmeiro and a two-out RBI single by Cal Ripken, playing in his first playoff game since the TOLEDO -- The loss of Wasean Tait to a season-ending knee injury during the season opener against Indiana cast a shadow on the Toledo Rockets' season.

The Rockets have been working since then to emerge from that shadow, however, and three wins later they are a much more confident team, and the once-lofty expectations are rising again.

Pinkel

Saturday's game at the Glass Bowl against Bowling Green (7 p.m., WBGU-FM, WFOB-AM) will allow Toledo to measure how far it has come.

"It took a little while to adjust because a lot of our stuff was built around Wasean's strengths, his speed and his quickness," Rocket quarterback Ryan Huzjak said of the Rockets' preseason All-American candidate. "Every game we've been able to improve, and we hope to do that again Saturday."

Tait entered the season with 3,478 career rushing yards, the most of any other active player at the Division I-A level. His loss left a gaping hole in the Rocket offense.

On top of that, two other tailbacks have been injured in the last three games, leaving the Rockets short of manpower at the position.

"I think we've made a little progress, but we are still not functioning real well on offense," said coach Gary Pinkel, who owns a 1-4 record against the Falcons but is coming off a season where the Rockets went undefeated and won the Las Vegas Bowl.

It was also a season that included a sound 35-16 beating of the Falcons.

"We've had a different tailback in there every single game, and with that we just have to work through it," Pinkel explained. "There is nothing else we can do."

Without Tait, much of Toledo's offensive load has fallen on Huzjak, a senior who owns the Rocket record for career passing touchdowns. He has seven touchdown passes through four games this season, and only two interceptions in his last 174 pass attempts.

He was an All-MAC second teamer a season ago.

"With our without Wasean, we want to have balance offensively," Huzjak said. "We still want the balance, just I think some of the responsibility for making some of the bigger plays falls on me a little more than we did when Wasean was back there."

Sophomore Justin Wooley will likely start at tailback for Toledo this week, becoming the fifth different starter in five games. He did rush for 121 yards on 25 carries in the win over Weber State after coming in for injured Sylvester Patton.

Kevin Kidd, the immediate successor to Tait, missed last week's game with a high ankle sprain but will likely play against the Falcons.

The Rockets have a proven wide receiving corps for Huzjak to throw to, including senior Shawn Spriggs with 14 catches for 207 yards.

On defense, the Rockets have given up 20 points per game, although steady improvement has been evident excepting Weber State's 24-point outburst Saturday. The Rockets needed a last-minute touchdown to edge their I-AA foes, 31-24 at the Glass Bowl.

"The defense has played really well this year," senior inside linebacker Craig Dues said. "Everyone basically knows what they have to do. We're pretty experienced, we just try to go out there and create some opportunities for the offense."

C. Dues

Pinkel was cautiously optimistic about his defense, noting there is still improvement to be made.

"I think we've improved," Pinkel said. "We didn't play real well [against Weber State], but I think for the most part I think we've improved as a defense."

"I think we haven't played our best defensive game yet. I think we are even a lot better than we're playing."

The Rockets look forward to this game just as the Falcons do -- as the biggest game of the season, regardless of where it's played, records of the teams, etc.

The fact that the two teams each come in with three-game winning streaks and are undefeated in the conference could make it all the better.

"Neither team could have won a game, but this game still means so much because of the great rivalry," Pinkel said. "It's a great college football rivalry, and not just in this league. This could be compared to the best in the country."

Volleyball loses 3 of 4 to Miami

William Sanderson
The BG News

Two familiar themes surfaced in last night volleyball match vs Miami, inexperience and inconsistency.

The powerful Miami Redskins beat the Falcons last night 15-10, 10-15, 15-9, 15-1. The loss drops Bowling Green to 1-4 in the MAC, 6-12 overall. Miami strengthens its hold on first place in the MAC at 4-0, 11-4 overall.

"I just think that's when our inexperience shows up," BG head coach Denise Van De Walle said. "We're just not in synch right now. Serving tonight was a problem in breaking momentum. We would work hard to side out, and then not be able to string points."

Indeed the serving was off tonight. The Falcons totaled 13 service errors, including six from the hard hitting Heather Murphy. Murphy, a left side hitter, did account for two of the Falcons' six service aces.

Despite the outcome, Van De Walle was relatively happy with the team's performance.

"I really thought we were playing pretty good volleyball," Van De Walle said. "We didn't block a lot of balls, but we slowed down a lot of balls. We did a nice job."

Had we been consistent and followed a little bit more of the game plan and what we wanted to do, I think we could have pulled an upset."

As usual, Lori Hilton accounted for the lion share of kills. She nailed 20, 10 more than next best Heather Murphy. Hilton also led the team in block assists with four, and had one solo block.

"When we played well, we played very well," said Hilton. "But then our unforced errors took us out of the game. We made a few mistakes, and got down on ourselves, and we never pulled out of it."

Despite her team's win, Miami head coach Carolyn Condit wasn't entirely satisfied.

"I thought we were sluggish," said Condit. "We've been on the road every match but one. We just need to go back home and reenergize. We weren't very sharp today, but we played when it counted."

Last night, Bowling Green started very well. They played Miami evenly for the first half of

It was the seventh time in the history of the AL playoffs that a team scored at least once in the first three innings of a game. Baltimore has done it three times.

Cleveland closed to 4-3 in the fourth when Sandy Alomar, Roberto's brother, singled in a run and Omar Vizquel hit a sacrifice fly. Notes: Orel Hershiser (15-9) will start Game 2 for Cleveland against Scott Erickson (13-12). ... Nagy allowed more home runs (two) than he did in 15 of his previous 16 starts. ... Soccer drill pays dividends Kickers turn the tables on Eastern Ill.

A late goal by Chris Dore on Sunday avoided a Falcon loss that would have sent them to their first four game losing streak since 1990. A Steve Klein marker in overtime enabled the Falcons to transform the otherwise frustrating game into a win.

This time, it was the Falcons battling from behind to get a win. Coach Mel Mahler attributes a large part of the success this weekend to a practice drill devised by assistant coach Wade Jean.

"Wade had devised a few practices last week where we were down a goal or up a goal with ten minutes to go," Mahler said. "We either had to maintain the lead or get back in the match. And it probably couldn't have been scripted any better. It was perfect timing as a training device for that match."

Senior tri-captain Joe Burch agreed that the practices played a large part in the success this week. Burch said that the players on the field just treated it like another drill, and they found a way to get it done.

The Falcon victory was BG's first match ever against Eastern Illinois.

Falcons to invade Xavier

The Brown and Orange take their 5-3-1 ledger to Cincinnati this evening to square off against Xavier University.

BG maintains a 4-0-0 record against Xavier, including a 3-0 victory last year at Cochrane Field. BG has not visited Xavier since 1982, when they posted a 2-1 victory. "You never know what Xavier team is going to show up from game to game," Mahler said. "They love to attack ... playing defense is not a concern for them ... they're just going to keep coming at you. And their philosophy, basically, is 'if you score three, we're going to try to score four.'"

Xavier's philosophy has not paid off for them so far. Their record is 2-4-0 heading into tonight's game. However, teams that put pressure up front on the Falcons have fared well early this season.

"Teams that counter-attack against us have had success," said Mahler. "The teams that build the ball slowly up and try to possess it, we do fine."

The Falcons have been decidedly more aggressive than their opponents, launching 209 shots to the opposition's 135.

"You never know what Xavier team is going to show up from game to game."

Klein 12, Opponents 11

Steve Klein broke the all-time assist record for BG with the primary assist on Chris Dore's goal.

Klein also scored the game-winning goal Sunday. The two point-scoring plays bring Klein's tally to 18 for the season.

Klein has been involved in 12 goals so far this year, the Falcons have had 11 goals scored against them.

We are family

Brothers Dave and Dan Kindl both posted assists in Sunday's game. They are one of two brother combos playing on the team this year. One of the others is Chris Dore, the freshman who scored the tying goal Sunday. Chris' brother is all-MAC sweeper Tony Dore.

At least they aren't as confused as the women's team from Wilamette University, Ore. That team features three pairs of identical twins.

Just one question, though: Who's better, Dan or Dave?

for the performance.

"Conditions can dictate, but not 21 shots," Brunsink said.

For the 36-hole Northern Illinois Huskie Classic this weekend, Brunsink said the main focus of practice will be pitching and chipping.

"We have to become more comfortable around the green," Brunsink said. "We haven't worked enough in those areas."

The coach is concerned with the team's upcoming performance as a unit, as only two of five team members have played the Oak Club of Genoa, where the tournament will be held.

"I think the team has the capability of finishing in the top three," Miller said.

Men's Golf

Due to a rainout, the men's golf team played only 18 holes of the 54-hole Eastern Kentucky University Colonel Classic. They finished in a tie for seventh place with Youngstown State University.

The team of five shot 305, good for 15 shots off the lead. Many unanswered questions that existed before this tournament still remain, according to men's golf coach Todd Brunsink.

"Because of the rain, we didn't have a chance to evaluate," Brunsink said. "I still don't have a feeling for who belongs in the starting lineup."

Tennis team to play at MSU invite

After a strong showing at the Ohio Intercollegiate, the Bowling Green women's tennis team is set to make its first appearance at the three-team Michigan State Invitational at East Lansing, Mich. on Saturday and Sunday.

Since there's just three teams, BG, Eastern Michigan and host MSU, the event will be played on just Saturday and Sunday.

This marks the first meeting against the Spartans, while it will be the second time the Falcons see the Eagles (who were in the BG Inv.).

Head Coach Penny Dean expects strong competition at the invitational.

"Of the two teams, Michigan State probably has the most depth," Dean said of the invitational. "I would say Eastern's number one player [Jean Kan-suth, who won the number one's at the BG Inv.] will probably be the best player in the tournament. There will be no easy matches."

Dean also hopes for improved doubles play as the team will be working hard on that all week, but Dean feels good about the singles play.

"We have new combinations," Dean said of the doubles. "They have to work together. It normally takes more time. Doubles play has been up and down."

team's play where the team posted an aggregate singles record of 18-13 and a 7-7 doubles mark, including 7-3 versus Mid-American Conference opponents (3-0 versus Akron, 2-0 versus Toledo, and 2-3 versus Miami).

The Falcons posted six finishes of fourth or better including two runner-up finishes in singles (Cindy Mikolajewski in Flight A Singles and Erika Mix in D Singles) and one in doubles (Julie Weisblatt and Beth Wilson).

Other high finishers were Jenny Schwartz and Wilson (third and fourth respectively in Flight C) and the duo of Schwartz and Cheung (sixth in Flight A Doubles). Among some of those wins include ones against Ohio State (3-7 in singles) and MAC favorite Miami.

"To get wins against Ohio State and Miami, you have to be ready to compete each match and you must play a good match so I'm real pleased with that," Dean said.

Baseball will earn back its patronage

Jim Tocco

BG News
Sports Writer

It's officially Autumn in America — time for the falling of leaves, and time for 20 baseball teams to give up the dream and go home.

For eight teams and 250 million Americans, this time of the year is electric. There's an anticipation in the air — it's almost like the deep breath before a scream.

It wasn't always this way. In 1994, the post-season was forgone because the players and the owners couldn't play nice. It was the first time baseball had been without a World Series since 1904.

For baseball's public image, it was a disaster. Baseball was already losing patronage to other sports, such as football and basketball, and it didn't need such a major blow.

In '95, the ticket and memorabilia sales were down about 20 percent from previous years. Baseball was struggling, and people wondered if America's national pastime could live up to its name anymore.

The scars run deep, but they heal with time. Besides, even the most devout baseball boycotters couldn't help talking last year about the determined young Indians, or Greg Maddux's third consecutive Cy Young award.

Many good things have happened to baseball in the past two years, and the excitement is beginning to show again. Marge Schott is out, exciting young rookies are in, and players and owners alike are beginning to realize that, in the end, the game is the most important thing. Who could deny the power of the baseball metaphor that was Cal Ripken's 2,131st game?

With one week to go in the American League's season, only one team (The Indians) had clinched its division. Six teams had a realistic shot at the remaining three playoff spots. It was an incredibly exciting pennant race, and it was an integral step in beginning to make baseball back into the conversation piece that it always has been.

Baseball fans have a new set of mysteries to wonder about, and they will get the joy of watching the questions reach their conclusions, and having new questions arise.

Can the Yankees regain their past glory and make it to the Series? Can the Orioles, with their tireless ironman of the infield, make it to the show? Can the Indians, back from a disheartening loss last year, and now a year more experienced, finally put it together? Can the Braves, with a title under their belts, fend off complacency and win again? The questions are numerous, and the only thing more exciting than posing them is watching them be answered.

"Baseball must be a great game, if not even the players and owners can ruin it."

A. Bartlett Giamatti

Former Commissioner of baseball

Speaking of interesting stories, what about Hideo Nomo's no-hitter? A Japanese pitcher that doesn't even speak English takes Major League Baseball by storm, and ends his rookie season with a no-hitter in Coors Field, where tee balls have been known to be hit over the fence. This year also saw Roger Clemens, ten years older and wiser, equaling his own mark with 20 strikeouts in one game.

Baseball is, after all, all about conversation. It is that aspect that makes baseball our national pastime, and our favorite sport. Baseball will earn its market back.

Okay, so the players and owners are greedy. Heck, we've even just seen that even the umpires are stubborn. But don't expect to see that ruining the game.

The late A. Bartlett Giamatti once said, "Baseball must be a pretty great game, if not even the players and owners can ruin it."

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Joe Paterno says Penn State won't have to play much better against Ohio State than it did against Wisconsin.

"Not much better," he said Tuesday. "Much, much, much better."

The No. 4 Nittany Lions (5-0, 1-0 Big Ten), who edged Wisconsin 23-20 on Saturday, are on the road again this weekend for a crucial conference battle against the third-ranked Buckeyes (3-0, 0-0).

"Ohio State is one of the best teams that I've seen in a long time," Paterno said. "We're going to have to play much, much better for us to stay in it. Even then we might not be able to stay with them."

Paterno said he was not upset about being a 10-point underdog or about having dropped one spot in the rankings. He said he was surprised, however, to be ranked so high and to already be playing in a game with national championship repercussions.

"That tells me that we're either a little ahead of schedule or we are a little overrated. One or the other. I'm not sure which," Paterno said. "We are a better football team at this stage than I thought we'd be, though."

Ohio State, coming off a 29-16 victory at Notre Dame, defeated the Lions 28-25 last season at Beaver Stadium when Eddie George scored on a 6-yard run with 1:42 to play. The Buckeyes survived a season-high performance by Penn State tailback Curtis Enis, who rushed for 146 yards.

Enis, who is averaging 137.5 yards per game this season, said he is even better prepared for the rematch.

"I've lost 10 pounds and I've increased my speed and my stamina to be a four-quarter back," he said. "I'm able to read defenses better this season and I'm more capable of making adjustments."

Looking back at the Wisconsin game, Paterno explained why he attempted a fake field goal that resulted in a third-quarter fumble.

"We had scouted Wisconsin and they gave us a situation in which we felt it would be reasonably effective," he said.

"I wanted to get the seven and hopefully put the game out of reach and play some younger people."

Paterno said he hadn't changed his mind about the new overtime rule even though his Lions would have needed an extra period if Wisconsin had made its 58-yard field goal attempt as time expired.

"I don't like it," he said. "One game last week went three overtimes. You get on television and the game's 3 hours and 15 minutes minimum. Now you put a couple of overtimes in there? I don't get paid by the hour."

"It's ridiculous. I don't see any reason for it. I've played three ties in 31 years," he said. "It puts an extra hardship on the kids and you are going to start to get people hurt."

Penn State was fortunate to escape the Wisconsin game with no injuries.

Linebacker Jim Nelson limped out of the game early but practiced on Monday. Guard Jason Henderson, who suffered a broken right hand in the Kickoff Classic, will not play but has resumed practicing.

game one, before the Redskins managed to open up a small lead and hang on for a 15-10 win. The second game saw BG come back from behind, to win game two 15-10.

In game three, Bowling Green dug itself a early hole. At one point, Miami held a 13-4 lead. The Falcons came up short in their comeback bid and lost 15-9.

Bowling Green just fell off the table in game four. They were one Lori Hilton kill away from being shut out. Hilton's lone kill made the score 15-1.

Aside from Hilton's 20 kills, other BG highlights include: Wendy Watkins 41 assists, Heather Murphy's 10 kills and 13 digs and Keisha Wilkins eight kills on 13 attempts for a .538.

This Friday Bowling Green will take a short trip up I-75 to visit Toledo for a 7:00 match. They'll take Saturday off, and prepare for a two game home stand the following weekend.

In spite of themselves, umpires take the field

David Ginsburg
Associated Press

BALTIMORE -- Baseball umpires took the field for Tuesday's playoff opener at Camden Yards even though Baltimore second baseman Roberto Alomar was there, too.

Less than an hour before the scheduled start of the postseason, umpires temporarily backed off their threatened boycott over last week's incident in which Alomar spat on umpire John Hirschbeck.

Alomar was given a five-game suspension but was allowed to play pending an appeal. Angered that he wouldn't be penalized until next season, the umpires threatened to disrupt baseball's postseason for the second time in 11 years.

The day began with baseball going to federal court yet again, trying to force umpires to work. Replacement umpires stood by ready to take the field, and the matter wasn't resolved until minutes before the scheduled start of the Orioles' game with Cleveland at Camden Yards. The game was delayed 17 minutes.

After two hours of talks in a federal judge's chambers, umpires agreed to work only through Thursday, the day that American League president Gene Budig agreed to hear Alomar's appeal of a five-game suspension. Umpires agreed to work the remainder of the postseason only if Budig, who can't enforce a suspension until after a hearing, decides the matter on Thursday.

"From the way they talked, I assume they'll work the first two games [of each series] without interruption... maybe they won't work I don't know," said Marty Springstead, executive director of umpiring for the American League.

Drew Coble, the home plate umpire for the Indians-Orioles game, said the umpires simply wanted the Alomar matter resolved this season, not next.

"We just wanted a swift and fair hearing, and we're going to get that," he said. "I think we'll abide by whatever Gene Budig does.

"We definitely want to work -- it's crunch time. We've worked all year for this. We're selected for the playoffs."

Before the game, Alomar was cheered by most of the sellout crowd, although there was a smattering of boos. He received a similar ovation before his first at-bat, then bounced a single up the middle on a 1-2 pitch from Charles Nagy.

Alomar said he wasn't distracted by the threatened boycott.

"I just went out there and played baseball," he said. "Everybody makes mistakes in life. We are all men here."

The Orioles' 10-4 victory gave them a 1-0 lead in the best-of-5 divisional playoff series.

Baseball's latest controversy began Friday night in Toronto, when Hirschbeck called Alomar out on strikes. The two argued, and Alomar was ejected. The player then spat in Hirschbeck's face.

The matter escalated when Alomar later said Hirschbeck had become bitter after the death of his son. Hirschbeck's 8-year-old son died three years ago from a rare brain disease and his 9-year-old son also is afflicted with the illness.

After learning of Alomar's comments Saturday, Hirschbeck ran into the Orioles' clubhouse hoping to confront the player. Hirschbeck didn't work Saturday's game, and Alomar sat out Sunday.

Alomar issued a written apology Monday and said he would donate $50,000 to charities fighting the disease that killed Hirschbeck's son.

Hirschbeck was not scheduled to work any postseason games.

Bud Selig, baseball's acting commissioner, said he was glad the umpires agreed to work and applauded Alomar's charitable donation.

"Our umpires are the best in the world and should never be subject to the kind of insolent behavior that was accorded John Hirschbeck Friday night," Selig said in a written statement.
